He will devote full time to his new position, having been granted a temporary leave of absence from the fire department.

The position was created by an executive order signed by Gov. Paul A. Dever and the appointment was made by the board of selectmen. Town Has Two In Contest For Representative

Andover for the first time faces the possibility of having two of its citizens elected as representatives to the general court.

As a result of the recent state primaries when three Democrats and three Republicans were nominated in the Fifth district. Rep. J. Everett Collins (R), of 35 Summer st., and Joseph A. Horan (D) of 6 Avon st., will be among the six candidates to contest for the three to be elected. Other candidates are Rep. Frank S. Giles Jr., (R) of Methuen, Rep. William Longworth, (R) of Methuen, Herbert B. Bower (D) of Methuen, and Walter Silva, (D) of Lawrence.

Andover almost had a third candidate nominated in this contest in Arthur E. McCabe of 41 Porter rd., who lost one of the Democratic nominations by 67 votes. Running on both tickets Mr. McCabe received 1411 Democratic and 1206 Republican votes, finishing fourth in both contests.

W. Andover Mail Still Via Lowell

Residents of West Andover who wanted to get their mail through the Andover post office instead of through Lowell as it comes to them now, will be disappointed to learn that the post office department has ruled against making any change in the present system.

Following the presentation of a petition with about 100 names at a meeting of the selectmen a few weeks ago, the latter body wrote the postal authorities asking to have the mail for these West Andover residents routed through the local office.

They have just received a reply from Postmaster Stephen A. Boland stating that the post office department has notified the Andover office "that information at hand is to the effect that a majority of the patrons residing in the territory in question are satisfied with the service from Lowell, and consequently no action is being taken."

Doherty Talks On Auto Insurance

William A. Doherty, member of the Andover school committee, and a local insurance agent, addressed the Retail Trade Board of the Greater Lawrence Chamber of Commerce Friday concerning the referendum question on the November state election ballot asking for a state-wide flat rate compulsory automobile insurance schedule.

Mr. Doherty pointed out that residents of some of the larger cities would benefit by such a change, but car owners in communities such as Andover and other areas around Greater Lawrence would have to pay a much higher fee than at the present time.

The Chamber of Commerce is planning an educational program to warn voters in this area of the dangers of voting in favor of this referendum. The sponsors of the movement are residents of Boston, Chelsea, Revere and a few other communities where compulsory automobile insurance rates are high due to the fact that drivers in these communities are involved in many more accidents than are operators in other localities. Some months ago, canvassers were engaged in Essex County securing signatures which enabled the referendum to be placed on the ballot. If this referendum should be passed at the November election, those in Greater Lawrence who register automobiles would be forced to pay a much higher rate than now exists. The compulsory automobile rate in any city or town is based on the number of insurance losses occasioned by cars which are garaged in the particular community. This section of the state has an enviable record and benefits by the current system of fixing rates.

Mrs. Jennie Russell of North Reading was a recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thaxter Eaton of Abbot st.

The annual membership drive by Andover's Central P.T.A. will start Monday, Oct. 2, under the direction of membership chairman Mrs. Harold C. Goddard Jr.

With an enrollment of 1229 students in the central schools this year, it is expected that the membership will exceed last year's new high of 931 which made central the second largest PTA group in the state. Prizes will be awarded to each school for the room with the highest membership percentage.

This Friday, plans for the drive will be announced in the Central schools. Explanatory letters will be taken home by all children next Monday. The newly appointed room mothers will be in their respective rooms next Tuesday. All parents having children enrolled in the central schools are eligible, regardless of their place of residence.

Among the events planned for the new school year are open house for parent-teacher conferences, six afternoon teas, four big evening programs, a Christmas program in the elementary schools, and special prizes for excellence in art, music and English in the upper schools, according to an announcement by Mrs. Glenn H. 60 years ago, the ultra-modern establishment which is graphically portrayed here producing Glennie's Milk began with a one-way milk route operated by our founder, Charles D. Glennie, from the Glennie Farm on Elm Street in North Andover. The production of more nutritious and hygienically pure milk has always been this organization's goal through the years. We attain that objective to the fullest degree in our Processing Plant which is the most up-to-date that modern technology can produce. We want you to see it.....

How to get there -

There are several ways of reaching the new Glennie's Processing Plant, but the most direct is to drive out along High Street into North Andover. Upon reaching Massachusetts Ave., the 3rd stop street, turn left and the plant is on your right a short distance from the intersection. See map sketch at right.....

says Mr. James Patrick O'Shea of Chicago

"My big Dodge has everything...famous dependability...extra roominess...ease of handling! Any other car offering as much would have cost $1000 more!"

Today especially, you want a car that's not only big and smart looking—but a car that's rugged, reliable, built to last.

NO OTHER CAR can match the Dodge reputation for dependability. No wonder new Dodge owners say you could pay $1,000 more for a car and still not get everything Dodge gives you . . . ruggedness and roominess . . . dependability and ease of handling . . . economy and performance.

START NOW to enjoy all the advantages

Dodge gives you . . . the extra spaciousness inside that means plenty of head room, leg room, shoulder room. The compact design outside that makes traffic driving easy and parking a cinch.

YOU'LL ENJOY the smoothness of Dodge Fluid Drive—the smoother starts, stops, the smoother "going"—yours at no extra cost on all Dodge models.

EDITORIAL THOUGHTS

NEGLECTING A CIVIC DUTY

Now that the lines have been drawn for the biennial state election on November 7, it is interesting to look back and consider one of the unexplainable aspects of the primary election, held last week.

Here in Andover, little more than one-third of the registered voters bothered to go to the polls. While admitting that there may be a number of "independent" voters here who never ally themselves with either party at primary time, the fact remains that a great many more men and women simply ignored the occasion.

No one doubts that the United States is now in one of the most critical eras of its history. It is time for serious consideration, calm discussion, and resolute planning for the days, months and years ahead.

Much criticism is being voiced of our present leadership, some deserved and some not. Many of those who enjoy the right to make such criticism are the very ones who remained away from the polls on primary day. By so doing they waived their right to express an individual preference for those who aspire to become the leaders of tomorrow. Such expressions are possible only in a democracy, where free elections and the secret ballot continue to prevail.

There are a lot of fellows in Korea at the present time who were unable to vote. Everyone knows why. It's not so easy to explain why thousands of eligible voters absented themselves from the voting precincts here last Tuesday when casting their vote would have been such a simple task.

Andover is recognized as a stronghold of the Republican party. The Republican primary ballot provided many contests all the way down from the governorship to the lesser state and county offices. Yet, numerous party members failed to exercise their right of franchise.

Considering last Tuesday's primary election from all angles, one of the most surprising aspects of all was the fact that some 4589 eligible men and women voters of Andover displayed such indifference to one of the most important of their civic duties.

"DO UNTO OTHERS. . ."

Perusal of the news of a recent day gives one pause to wonder.

A Los Angeles bachelor recluse, who wasn't suspected of having much of the world's goods, died. His bankers revealed that he had left $500,000. One hundred thousand dollars of this fortune he willed to a family who had picked him up along a roadside one day long ago and taken him to the beach for a day's outing. He never saw them again, but the happy day lived in his memory and the thoughtful couple have been fully rewarded for their kindly act.

Not so fortunate two men in Boston who saw a plainclothes Deputy U. S. Marshal arresting a dope peddler. Unconvinced that the marshal was not a "phony" they gave him a bad time and a lot of lip as he slipped the handcuffs on his prisoner. Their nosyness became so bombastic that the marshal arrested them, too. In Federal court they vowed "never again."

Mingling with strangers may bring strange endings.

VIEWS OF THE NEWS

By LEONARD F. JAMES

Many years ago Winston Churchill was Britain's counterpart of our secretary of the navy. On his first official visit to the British fleet, two years before the first world war, he made a remark which he certainly did not expect to become prophetic. As he stood watching the fleet in review he sensed that the very existence of the British nation, its livelihood and its safety, depended on the few ships passing before him.

On that grey afternoon he speculated upon the future of his country, perhaps the world, if those ships should suddenly cease to exist. "Open the sea-cocks and let them sink beneath the surface and in a few minutes—half an hour at the most—the whole outlook of the world would be changed." He could visualise the dissolution of the empire, see isolated communities left struggling alone, and know that Europe would fall into the iron grip of the Teuton. "There would be left far off across the Atlantic unarmed, unready, and as yet uninstructed America to maintain, single-handed, law and freedom among men."

An old man now, Churchill has lived to see another foe threaten his nation, now getting older and weaker like himself. The British navy is not scuttled or sunk upon the bottom of the ocean. But Britain no longer determines the politics of the world as once she did to so large a degree. And the United States—by no means unarmed or uninstructed upon the ways of foreign affairs—has emerged as the leader to maintain law and freedom among men. Not quite alone, but head and shoulders above all others.

Decline Of British Power

Two wars have changed the face of the world, perhaps more than is realised. When the last war ended it was assumed that world stability rested upon three power concentrations—the United States and the western hemisphere, Russia and her satellites, and the nations of western Europe with Britain as the pre-eminent leader.

But that third power concentration is much weaker than was assumed; the world now lies divided between the United States and Soviet Russia. World politics must remain poised between those two rivals, with Britain playing only a minor role. For she can never recover her former position. To speak of British "recovery" is to voice a hope that has little chance of fulfillment. At best Britain can be stabilised in its present position, but it cannot reach the power of position it once held. This may be a hard fact to swallow, but fact it remains.

Britain Cannot "Recover"

Britain has passed the zenith of her power both economically and in foreign affairs. She is a little island, one third the size of Texas, with 48,000,000 people largely dependent upon the outside world for its existence. Once its people were the wealthiest because the world was its market. It sat across the great trade routes, it had a navy to defend itself and its far-flung interests. It could buy and sell in the four corners of the earth. It by means grew all its own food, but it could buy all it needed with the money made from its coal, its manufactured products, and its tremendous foreign investment that brought in huge dividends. This enormous wealth could satisfy the increasing demands of the lower classes, and develop a middle class as a compromise between rich and poor. And Britain could afford the tremendous sum it spent not only on her own defense but for keeping other nations relatively weak and divided.

Her Foreign Now Ours

But today she cannot afford the costs that effective foreign policy demands—costs that we are now bearing. Her foreign investments are gone to pay for past war, once-important coal is deteriorating and costing more to produce and her foreign markets are no longer easy to keep. She is suffering from the inescapable fact that she is only a processing nation, fashioning imported raw materials into finished products that must be sold in an ever tighter foreign market. Only a small fraction of her people live on the soil; four-fifths of her population lives in towns, the highest proportion of town life in the world. And she must import more than half of her food, and more than three-quarters of her raw materials. For these she can pay only in exports.

The very materials for her own defense must be bought abroad, and the burden is proving so expensive that her foreign policy is changing. The tasks she once undertook—tasks frequently misunderstood by others—are now being assumed by us. The United States fleet now guards the Atlantic; our warships now further our foreign policy in the Mediterranean. Britain for nearly a century kept Russia in check on the European frontier. That task is today essentially ours. History is teaching us that foreign policy can provide no simple solutions to international affairs. As Britain declines we are forced to take her place on the international scene. We are to find more and more that it is a full-time business demanding seven-days-a-week vigilance.

AT THE LIBRARY

A Book On How To Live

Another book for thoughtful readers has been added to the Memorial Hall Library, and it promises to become one of the most discussed titles in the field of social philosophy to be published in recent years. The book "On Being Human," by Professor Ashley Montagu, a development of his thesis which first appeared in the Saturday Review of Literature as "Man And The Social Appetite," is a magnificent study of the value of the long-accepted idea of the survival of the fittest. Professor Montagu declares that this theory is not only false, but destructive, in that it is directly responsible for the deplorable state of "personal, impersonal and international conflict" in which man finds himself today.

Man does not want independence, he claims, in the sense of functioning independently of his fellowmen; this sort of negative independence leads to the loneliness and the fears which grow from insecurity; whether or not he is aware of it, what man wants is the kind of freedom that comes from a feeling that one is a part of a group, accepted, wanted, loved and loving. Any theory contrary to this leads to an isolation that is almost unknown in the kingdom of living form; fungi, bacteria, higher plants and animals all show a drive to form social aggregates.

He reviews the damage done to personalities which have been deprived in infancy of the natural love and affection of mother to child, and, more than most writers in his field, he suggests ways in which there can be decided improvement of human relations through education.

Those who have read Lecomte du Nouy's startling theory of man's true place in the Universe, or Pitrim Sorokin's more recent study of "good" human beings, "Altruistic Love," or Albert Schweitzer's "Philosophy of Civilization," are assured a delightful experience in reading "On Being Human."

Film Program At Library

The fourth of the pre-view programs, scheduled for Wednesday evening, October 4, promises to present several interesting films which could be used widely by various groups in any community. Parents would find much help in the film "The Baby Sitter," which outlines, through the experience of Mary Gibson, a baby-sitter in the Brown's home, just what should be expected of this important person. "You And Your Family" points out the various problems that occur in the family and shows good solutions. "A Criminal Is Born" is a serious picture of the criminal population in the United States today, and places the burden where it rightly belongs.

A young couple who want to marry discover what it takes to be ready for marriage through a practical checklist of criteria prepared by a marriage counselor, in the picture "Are You Ready For Marriage," and a similar study of emotional maturity is made in "Act Your Age," which explains ways and means of overcoming the handicaps that come with inability to grow up.

The program will begin at 8 o'clock sharp.
